I inspected the site in Halleswaram proposed to be acquired for purposes of extension this morning along with the Sanitary Engineer, the Executive Sanitary Engineer and the Health Officer The site adjoins a swamp only a road the link road - separating The water table in the site is very high as was seen by examining the wells in it The site therefore is not quite ideal for human habitation There are however other considerations which weigh in its favour amongst which its proximity to the existing inhabited locality is an important one If the Municipality undertake to provide subsoil drainage and in due course to take up the drainage of the swamp there seems no objection to the acquisition of the land for purposes of extension
